LUNZ Grasslands is inviting farmers to take part in a short survey

Cotswold Seeds is proud to be involved with LUNZ Grasslands, which is inviting farmers to take part in a shrot survey

The UK government has committed to achieving net-zero emissions by 2050, and actions taken by the UK farming sector will be vital in moving towards this.

The UK has set a target to reach net-zero emissions by 2050, and how grasslands are managed on farms will play a big part in getting there. The LUNZ Grasslands project is looking at practical ways grassland farming can support net zero while also improving soil health, biodiversity, and farm business resilience.

LUNZ Grasslands is inviting farmers to take part in a short survey to share their views on different grassland management practices. Your responses will help make sure farmers' voices are reflected in future UK policy and research.

The survey is open to farmers, farm workers, land managers, and organisations supporting farming across England, Scotland, Wales, and Northern Ireland. As a thank-you for your time, £2 will be donated on your behalf to your choice of one of eight farming support charities across the UK once you complete the survey.
